Designers and architects play a significant role in creating more equitable and just communities. Join our panelist in a conversation that uses a health equity lens and intentional design process reflective of the past and rooted in place to help increase individual and community capacity for resilience.

This session will expand upon “Centering Equity through an Integrative Design Process for Health Resilience” framework by Mithūn and the Green Health’s Partnership (GHP) and Urban Sustainability Directors Network (USDN) “Equity and Building Practice Framework”.
